Students build a massive mural to honor harbor seals

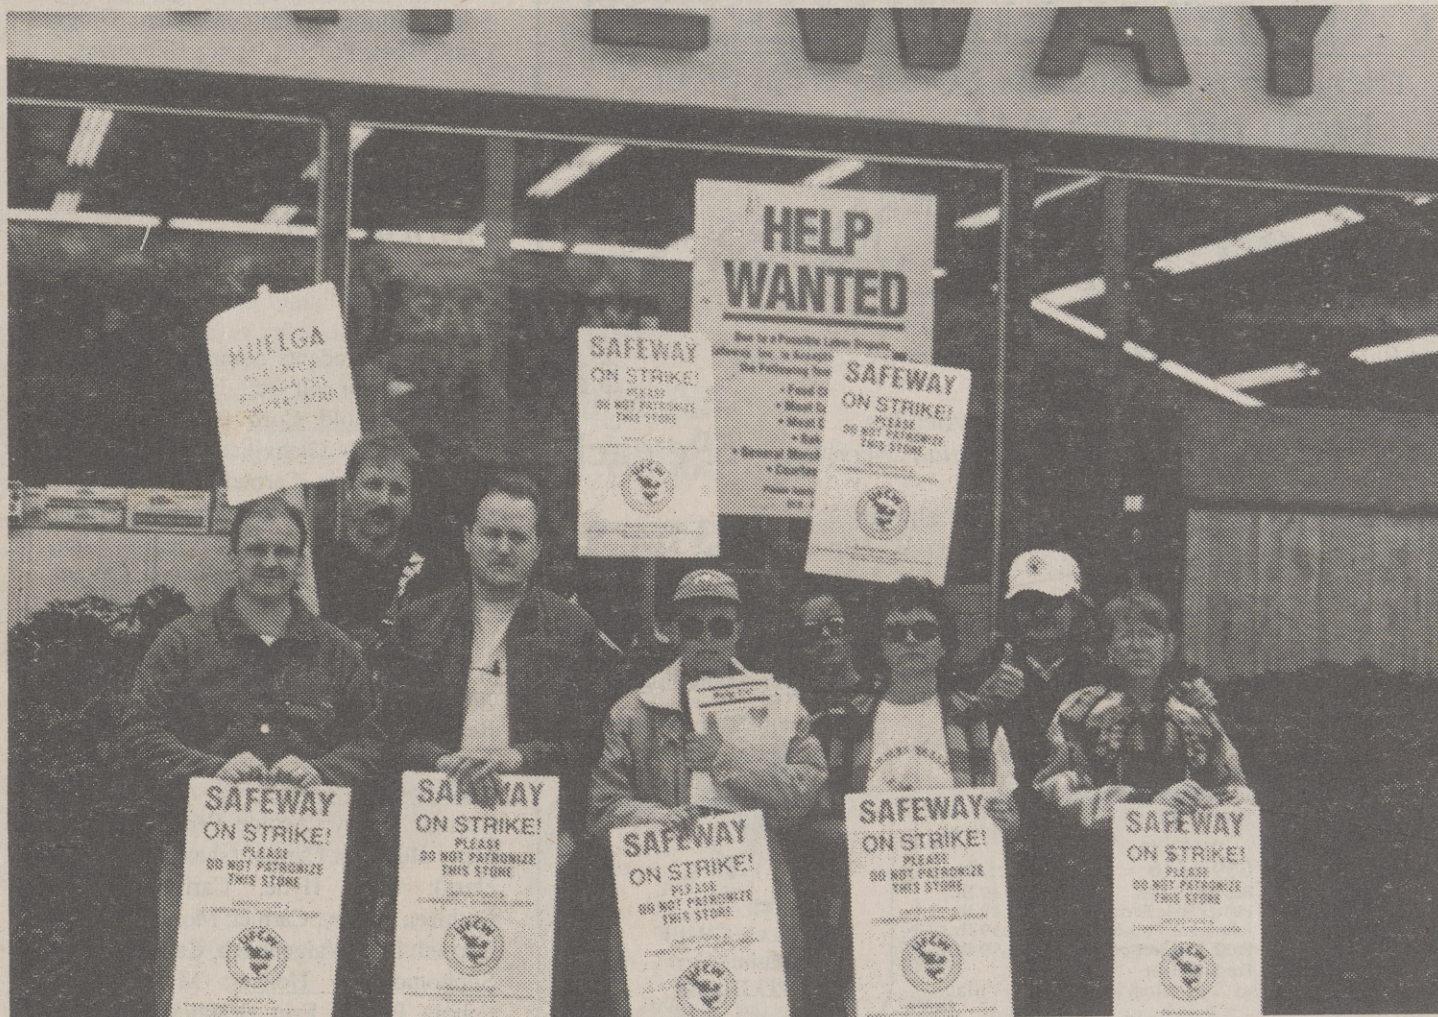

By Elizabeth Cowley

The Pebble Beach Company (PBC) and the SPCA held a brief ceremony to acknowledge 10 local schools which created a series of 35 mural panels on Monday, April 4 at Cypress Point Lookout in Pebble Beach. The murals will act as a barrier between the public and the harbor seals during their birthing season in April and May.

The mural project has been co-sponsored by the PBC and the SPCA for the past 2 years. The program provides local school children with the opportunity to learn about and participate in the Harbor Seal Protection Program in a creative way. Wendy Wibbens, artist with the SPCA, conceptualized the project and the materials were supplied by the PBC and SPCA, although the students were responsible for the artwork. The panels depict 4 sea habitats: rocky shores, kelp forests, open bay and sandy sea floor.

Ed Brown, PBC Vice President of Planning and SPCA Board Member, opened the ceremony by recognizing the participating schools and thanking the Lone Cypress Company, which owns PBC, for its support and commitment in protecting the harbor seal and the environmental outreach educational program. Mr. Watanabe of the Lone Cypress Company congratulated the students for their participation.

Sheila McMahon, Humane Educator for the SPCA, demonstrated some harbor seal adaptations through an educational costume worn by Castroville student Diane Hernandez which illustrated the seal's layers of blubber, flippers and "Velcro" nostrils. This educational costume will be employed to expose over 1,000 students to the harbor seal and its adaptations as a mammal of the sea.

Supervisor Sam Karas said that "It is important for young people to participate in environmentally sensitive programs such as this." Supervisor Judy Pennycook indicated that, as a mother, she fully supports the privacy provided for the harbor seals while giving birth. To conclude the ceremony, certificates of recognition were awarded to all participating classes.

Bay School reopens after flood repairs

The little red schoolhouse on the west side of Highway 1 two miles south of Carmel's Rio Road, known as "Bay School", is now open for morning and afternoon pre-school. The school had been closed for one week following the recent flood. The school building itself was unharmed, but the newly constructed animal pen flooded immediately after the torrential rains began. The resident ducks, rabbits, birds and pygmy goats were threatened by rising water. A concerned Bay School parent from Carmel rushed to the aid of the animals during the flood and dug a drainage ditch away from the pen to the back of the school property. The bridge linking Bay School to Carmel was closed shortly after the parent returned safely home.

Following the closure of the bridge and the school, Bay School parents residing in the Carmel Highlands tended daily to the newly created irrigation ditch and to the feeding of the animals. "We had just made a trip to the feed store, so the animals had plenty to eat all week," Highlands Bay School parent Gina Weston explained. "Usually I don't take care of the animals, but we are a cooperative pre-school, so we're all used to sharing the work."

Bay School's largest public open house and fund raising activity is the annual Bay Day Carnival, Silent Auction and Raffle which is scheduled to take place at the school on Saturday, May 13. This year's activities include games, prizes, food, rides and the unveiling of newly purchased playground equipment. The raffle grand prize is a Maui vacation courtesy of SunTours. The Bay Day Silent Auction includes overnight stays at luxury hotels, dinners at top-rated peninsula restaurants and other high-quality goods and services offered to the public at bargain prices. Donation of items for the Bay Day Silent Auction can be arranged by calling Lore Riley at 626-8769.

Bay School was founded 116 years ago by the whalers who lived at Point Lobos. Today it exists as a parent education class sponsored by the Carmel Unified School District. Parents become students practicing the art of parenting through working experience at the Bay School Nursery. Parents of children attending the school are required to attend a three-hour class every three out of four Monday evenings per month during the school year and also serve as the teacher's assistant in the classroom one half day per week. Daily classroom activity and curriculum for the children is supervised by Director Kathy Miller.

Pebble Beach Company commits to alternative fuels

By Elizabeth Cowley

The Pebble Beach Company (PBC) introduced its alternative fuel program on Thursday, April 6. The PBC is the first private company in Monterey County to convert to vehicles fueled by natural gas. The project was a joint effort between the PBC, PG&E and the Monterey Bay Unified Air Pollution Control District (MBUAPCD). Four converted vehicles and a fueling station were available for viewing at the presentation.

Ted Horton, PBC Vice President of Resource management, was in charge of the project and said the natural gas vehicles are "Good business and good for the environment; a win-win situation." Natural gas burns cleaner, emitting fewer pollutants into the air and is cheaper at $.62 compared to $1.25 for an equivalent amount of gasoline. Supervisor Sam Karas said the PBC is demonstrating that "ecotourism can work."

Spece Erickson, PG&E Clean Air Transportation Coordinator, presented the PBC with an $8,400 grant check and congratulated the PBC for their initiative and indicated that natural gas is catching on as more refueling stations are becoming available and the less expensive fueling costs are making natural gas vehicles increasingly attractive. Mr. Erickson said that in the near future, everyone can have a natural gas car and fuel it at their home with a fueling station hooked up to their natural gas line. Natural gas is already widely available for home use with over 2 million miles of natural gas lines nationwide.

Mark Miller, MBUAPCD Transportation Planner, said that "Every one of the PBC natural gas vehicles will run 30% cleaner than before." Natural gas vehicles burn cleaner than their gasoline counterparts, emitting a few tenths of a gram of carbon monoxide per mile compared to 3.5 grams from a gasoline vehicle. In addition, natural gas vehicles do not emit soot and emit less carbon dioxide than gasoline powered vehicles. Carbon monoxide is toxic and a contributor to a myriad of respiratory diseases and cancers and is one of 7 emissions restricted under the Clean Air Act of 1970.

As of January 1995, there were 3,500 natural gas vehicles nationwide and 201 government owned natural gas vehicles in the Monterey area. PBC currently has 4 converted vehicles and by the end of 1995 will have a total of 20 natural gas vehicles. Each vehicle conversion costs about $5,000 although grant assistance was provided by both PG&E and MBUAPCD. As more government agencies and private companies convert to natural gas vehicles, they will help to create a market for these vehicles, eventually making this cleaner-burning transportation alternative less expensive and more readily available to the general public.

TOUCHING BASES

Peter Lyon

To be first...What's it like to be The First--the first person on the moon, the first person to eat an artichoke, or the first kid to make the first play of the season in Carmel Valley Little League? Herewith we have a brief but meaningful run-down of the first moments of the 1995 season--not the Official Opening Day, which occurs well after the season is under way, but the real first moments.

March 25 was, as you recall, one of these truly magic, shining days in Carmel Valley, sparkling and fresh, proclaiming "Spring!" and "Baseball!" At 10:30 that morning four teams took the fields: on Shakal Field, the Red Sox v. the Rangers, where Travis Barber threw the first pitch to Erik ("Withakay") Saxton at the top of the inning, and Matt Rankin responded in kind to Brent Thompson to open the bottom of the first.

Over on Benny, the Braves hot-shot Ross ("Gnarley") Farley wound up to hurl at the Braves' Damen Hattori at the top of the inning, while in the bottom half Damen returned the compliment by smoking one at Jered Chapple--and the season was off to a magnificent start. Let's tip the cap to Jim ("Gulliver") Saxton of the Red Sox, Rusty ("Dynasty") Vandervort of the Rangers, Jamie ("Try to name me") Warren of the Braves, and Michael ("Benchriders") Fields of the Eagles--the Legal Eagles? Judge for yourself.

Catfight...We guess you could call it a real zoo, a felicitous feline fray, that opening game of the majors' Little League season. Not only did the Tigers scrap with the Lions, but there was a Lyon in the Tigers' line-up! Under those same glorious sunny skies that had graced the morning games, Jeff Watts of the Lions sent Nick Buich to snake the First Ball at Justin McChesney-Wachs, and in the bottom of the frame Glen Nolte called upon Patrick Thomas to stare down Reed Heneks. Much later in the day, when the Indians tried to bring down the Falcons, Gary Pennington chose Nat Ricigliano to take the first swing against Ben di Grazia, while in the bottom of the inning Larry Warcken sent Dugan O'Neal in to stand against the first pitch whipped in by Isaac Siegel.

Homer was a poet...The arc of a well-struck home run has the ache of a great poem, poetry in motion, a moving poem. Homer the poet also celebrated great feats of athleticism; let us do the same in the spirit of "firsts" for the year. Number one in the line of these celebrities is Perkin di Grazia, who hit a two-run round-tripper for the Eagles; and in the afore-mentioned opening catfight, Patrick Thomas will not soon forget the poetic justice of lofting a classic home run--with two men on--over the Lions and over the left field fence. Good job, Pat.

Population explosion...There must have been something in the water a few years ago. Jim ("T-Ball") Saxton reports that the ranks of the MiniMonsters have grown to over 150, with 10 teams taking the field on those early pearly mornings. Bring your hot coffee and thermal underwear and watch the future major leaguers in their "lights out" helmets scampering for glory on the dewy grass.

First, the bad news...We don't like reporting this sort of thing, but apparently a few snakes slithered into paradise during the last flood. On the very day when the waters were at their height, some throwback to the Very Dark Ages did over $500 worth of damage to Jim Sommerville's tractor parked at the Little League field. If you have even the faintest clue, give Jim a call. He has worked incredibly hard, not only on the League fields, but especially on the recent flood damage along the river. He deserves better than the mindless vandalism of testosterone-poisoned barbaric troglodytes.

And now the good news...We have commented previously that one of the joys of Little League in Carmel Valley is the comparative absence of what one would call the "Little League Syndrome" amongst the parents. We hear very little raucous parental interference with the young people's enjoyment of the game. That sort of good sportsmanship was clearly in evidence on opening day when the parents were applauding good play no matter who made it, and it was repeated again during a recent Tigers-Falcons game. Jim Conrad, devouring sunflower seeds and sprinkling them liberally under the bleachers in order to amend the soil for some future garden, cheered most vigorously for every effort on the field, irrespective of the color of the uniform. When asked, "Hey, whose side are you on, anyhow?" Jim replied with that glorious smile, "Both of them." Here's a tip of the cap to you, Jim, and two tickets to the 1994 World Series.

How sweet it is...Well-mannered young people in CVLL uniforms will appear at your door soon. They will ask you to buy chocolate bars. Buy lots of chocolate bars, please. It doesn't matter whether your dentist owns part of the company; just support the Carmel Valley Little League with your generous purchase. We thank you, very sweetly.

VALLEY VOICE

Vision. It is the quality of being able to grasp and comprehend that which is obscure to others. It is foresight, insight and perception. When I read the Carmel Valley Master Plan, I see the vision that it's authors had for our valley.

The #1 goal of the plan is "to preserve the rural character of Carmel Valley." As one drives along Carmel Valley Road, the rural vista is paramount. Great effort has been made to hide development behind hills so that our view remains bucolic.

Imagine what the valley would look like if the traffic from Carmel Valley Ranch had been controlled by a traffic signal.

Fortunately, this was not the solution. Instead, we have an underpass which allows traffic on the south side of the road to merge with westbound traffic. Our vista is unimpaired.

The master plan recommends the use of left turn channelization and/or ingress-egress tapers at significant access points on Carmel Valley Road to help us get on and off the road safely. This continues to be the preferred method to handle turning maneuvers, not traffic signals. It requires drivers to be responsible and use good judgment. Unfortunately, some people in the valley want the security of a traffic signal to assist them. Strong pressure is being placed on the board of supervisors to install traffic signals at Carmel Middle School and Rancho San Carlos Road.

We know that traffic at the mouth of the valley has increased by 35% since the master plan was adopted in 1986. After careful consideration, the Carmel Valley Road Improvement Committee recommended only one capacity improvement and that was for the Rio Road extension. The plan line was adopted in 1969. It begins east of where Rio Road currently dead ends, proceeds along property owned by the School District on their southern boundary, then moves in a northeasterly direction to link up with the current entrance to Rancho Canada off Carmel Valley Road.

This is also the only intersection where the committee recommended a traffic signal to save on the cost of an underpass. This improvement can remove as much as 40% of the traffic currently on Carmel Rancho Boulevard. It could get the entrance to Carmel Middle School off Carmel Valley Road. When combined with the widening of Carmel Valley Road from Carmel Rancho to Highway 1 and the climbing lane on Highway 1, we will have relieved the congestion at the mouth of the valley.

The authors of our master plan knew the Rio Road extension would be needed. It is now our responsibility to see that it becomes reality. The road committee recommended that this should be a developer-funded improvement with contributions coming from all development and discretionary use permits which attract traffic to the commercial area. For a project such as this to succeed, we must have the willpower to accumulate these impact fees and not have them dissipated in response to the request of some interest group.

The challenge for us is this: can we maintain the vision?

WHAT'S NEXT? Mel Vercoe

Whatever happened to the democracy idea? Sure, we have more nuclear killpower than most other countries, (with enough of it on submarines to assure the destruction of anybody threatening us), and with the Pegasus system for launching orbiting nuclear bombs, we don't have to worry about preemptive enemy strikes wiping out our retaliation capability. However, being up there with China and a few other countries with nuclear wipe-out weapons shouldn't mean that we have a duty to go all over the planet telling other countries how to behave with neighboring countries and even inside their borders, but that has become standard U.S. foreign policy. We will be very lucky, if our democracy gets to the end of this century without managing to start World War III with our meddling in about a dozen places on other continents.

The latest sales pitch is our Defense Department's revelation about Iran possible deploying chemical weapons. The timing was perfect, right after the nerve gas attack by some religious extremists in Japan.

If democracy has to include secret government at a cost of $28 billion per year, and a constant barrage of scare tactics to either get us involved in foreign conflicts or get us to spend ourselves silly on additional overkill, then it should be called something else, because it does not resemble the democracy idea that we learned about in our history books.

It appears that the military industrial complex that Eisenhower warned us about, together with a lot of "strange priority" people we mistakenly sent to Washington to safeguard our country's interests have done a great job. We don't really need Gingrich's Contract on America. We are leaving our offspring a hopeless and still-growing debt, almost 5 trillion. We have to borrow another $30 billion per month just to make the interest payments. Have a good day.

LETTERS to the Editor

EDITOR, CARMEL VALLEY SUN

The residents of the Robles Del Rio area of Carmel Valley are indeed shell shocked and flood-ravaged for the second time, but, thanks to the generosity of some wonderful people, we are feeling a lot better today and still have high hopes. The help of friends and neighbors has been overwhelming.

The Robles Del Rio Lodge went above and beyond the call of duty to help all of the residents of the area. They offered rooms for us to stay in at no charge, fed us three meals a day and generally provided a crisis central for all of us. THANK YOU, even in capital letters, just isn't enough to say to these wonderful people, but for right now it will have to do.

All the things they did for us were done with no large fanfare and news just spread from neighbor to neighbor. Like many other areas on the Monterey Peninsula, we have a lot of rebuilding to do and the help of many people should be recognized. PG&E got our power back on in record time and Granite Construction crews worked all night Saturday to reopen Rosie's Bridge for us as it is our only way in or out of the area. Heartfelt thanks to all of you!

Carmel Valley people have always helped each other out in the past, but now more than ever we are all pulling together to make things better and get back to normal as soon as possible. Donna Heard and the "River Rats" are back in business feeding and informing our neighborhood and keeping morale high; another crisis central for all of us. So many people, so little space...THANK YOU! We aren't giving up yet!

Sincerely,

Kirk and Cheri Gayman, Maryann Meza,

EDITOR, CARMEL VALLEY SUN

There have been several letters recently commenting on the proposed Carmel Valley Trails Plan (CVTP). Most of these letters have expressed fears over perceived loss of rights. Some have called for defeat of this plan or any trails plan in Carmel Valley.

To understand why this is not possible, it is important to remember that trails serve two purposes: alternative transportation as well as recreation. The Monterey County General Plan calls for establishment of a comprehensive countywide trails system. Along with the Greater Monterey Peninsula Area Plan and the Carmel Valley Master Plan, it also contains policies calling for the establishment of trails, paths, etc., as forms of alternative transportation. To get rid of a trails plan in Carmel Valley may require review in these other plans as well. Money is currently available from state and federal sources for alternative transportation, which this county is not likely to turn down.

The drafters of the proposed Carmel Valley Trails Plan thought their proposal was flexible, but others have found that nonspecificity to be the very threat the dread. The proposed plan can be modified to make it workable by including the following:

1) Participation of private property owners in the trails system must be voluntary.

2) The proposed trails system must be viewed as a trails corridor in its entirety; not an exacting identification allowing flexibility only on large, undeveloped parcels (as they have written).

3) A Carmel Valley Trails Committee, composed of residents of Carmel Valley and assisted by technical staff, must be created to oversee the establishment of priorities, trail alignment, best utilization of resources including available funds and creation of benefits for those property owners who choose to participate.

There must be some means to abandon existing trail easements which make no sense and will never be utilized. Also, private property owners who do agree to participate must be indemnified. Although state law and court rulings clearly establish that the private property owner has no liability over the use of a public trail on his or her land, court costs must be paid when the inevitable fool tries to sue anyway.

Carmel Valley residents are not the first to have fears about trails on private land. North County residents were able to produce a plan that adequately addressed the rights of private property owners while allowing for a trails plan, and so can we.

Dear Carmel Valley Resident:

We have heard from a lot of you recently about the changes in garbage service throughout Carmel Valley. Many of you are concerned about rising costs and are confused about the changes and the various service options available. In order to clarify this situation, we are calling a public meeting on Thursday, April 27, 1995, at 7:00 p.m. at the Carmel Middle School Library, 4380 Carmel Valley Road.

Under State Law AB 939, every community is charged with the responsibility to reduce the amount of solid waste it generates by 25% this year and 50% by the year 2000. The law was created to prolong landfill life and to preserve our precious environment.

The county's response to this has been to thoroughly examine our waste stream and reduction options. County staff, community and agency officials, interested residents and the refuse haulers have all worked together to come up with a state-approved master plan. The board of supervisors has approved programs within the master plan based on their effectiveness and cost efficiency.

The Carmel Valley Disposal Service has cooperated fully with the county to communicate and implement the new programs as approved. Their role as our solid waste hauler has changed dramatically. We now count on them to collect three different categories of materials: garbage, yard waste and recyclables. The latter two require special handling and new technology to process. Our landfill in Marina also has taken on additional responsibilities in the handling of yard waste, inerts, wood waste and hazardous waste.

The extension of landfill costs money. These investments now will protect us from major financial and environmental problems in the future. We would like to receive your input and participation.

Very truly yours,
Judy Pennycook, Supervisor
Second District

The 6th annual Cachagua Country Faire will be held Saturday, May 20, 1995 at the Cachagua Community Center. This annual event is the major fund raiser for the Cachagua Firefighters Association, Cachagua Community Center and the Cachagua Area Property Owners Association - all of which are non-profit organizations.

Every year the Faire continues to grow and become a greater success than the year before and would not be possible without the support of many wonderful people. We are hoping for a particularly successful year in view of the recent flood damage to the Cachagua community. Like last year, there will be a barbecue, food and craft booths, children's games, a horseshoe tournament, music, live and silent auctions, a raffle and much more.

We are asking for your help. Could you donate an item(s) for the raffle, live or silent auction? If you prefer, you may also make a cash donation which will be used to purchase an item in your name. Please either send your response to: Cachagua Country Faire, PO Box 512, Carmel Valley, CA 93924 or contact Nanci Lambert at 659-4947 as soon as possible. Your support in donating an item(s) or service(s) is greatly appreciated and will benefit our community.

Local bottled water company honored for generosity

The Carmel chapter of the American Red Cross recently recognized Big Sur Bottled Water of Salinas for "services provided to those who were in need of assistance following the Northern California floods."

Big Sur Bottled Water donated 150 cases of water to the Red Cross for their relief centers in the Carmel and Carmel Valley areas. Big Sur also donated over 880 cases of water to the Second Harvest Food Bank for use in the Salinas and Pajaro areas.

Founded in 1991, Big Sur Bottled Water is the only locally owned bottled water plant in Monterey County.

Avoid poisoning your pets

This is the time of year when the critters that drive us nuts come out. There are all kinds of products and services for eradication and you need to be selective in what is safest for your family and pets. Unfortunately, poisons are the first choice. They are usually in the form of a bait that is very appealing to the critters you are trying to eradicate. Unfortunately, they may also be appealing to small children and pets. If ingested, they often are fatal.

In the event of accidental or suspected poisoning, call poison control, your local physician, hospital or veterinarian. Immediate and proper procedures can save lives and may prevent major injury.

Did you know that chocolate is poison to dogs? Depending on the size of your dog and the amount consumed, eating chocolate could be fatal to your pet. Call your local veterinarian for more information and keep the chocolate Easter eggs out of reach of your pets.

Flood Update

By Bonnie Simms

The number of homes affected by the recent floods in the Carmel and Carmel Valley areas has now reached 515, with 206 of those homes receiving major damage. According to Noreen Violetta, public information spokesperson for the American Red Cross in Carmel, "resident's homes in Carmel Valley affected by the flood was 124, with 65 of those homes receiving major damage. In Carmel, 391 homes were affected with 141 receiving major damage. The Red Cross has processed and helped over 250 families in the Carmel and Carmel Valley areas and we will continue to provide services to all disaster clients as long as needed."

The Carmel Rancho Red Cross Center is now closed, but will be transitioning family services to the Carmel Chapter, located at Dolores and 8th in Carmel. The hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. Spokesperson Violetta said that of the 39 counties in California receiving flood related damages, "Monterey County was one of the worst hit areas, with 950 cases reported in Monterey and Santa Cruz Counties.

More information regarding services to flood victims may be obtained by calling the Red Cross at 625-5764.

Food collection continues at Crossroads

The Food Bank for Monterey County (FBMC) and the Crossroads shopping center in Carmel are joining together to help victims of the floods throughout Monterey County. Between April 8 and April 15, people can bring a bag of groceries for the Flood Recovery Food Drive to The Crossroads and get a free Easter lily.

The food collected will be distributed to local non-profit agencies that are helping the community recover from the devastation that was a result of the recent flooding. "The flooding destroyed farm crops as well as property, which means many people lost their jobs and their homes. The Crossroads is offering the community the opportunity to help flood victims and celebrate Easter at the same time," said FBMC Executive Director Marci Huston.

Red Cross moves disaster relief

Red Cross Disaster Relief is consolidating services to the local chapters.

ARC Service Center in Carmel will move to the local Carmel Chapter as of 6 p.m. March 31 and will provide service at the chapter at Dolores & 8th Ave. in Carmel 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

ARC Service Center in Salinas will move to the local Monterey County Chapter as of 6 p.m. April 1st and will provide service at the chapter at 942 Lupin Dr.

An experienced Red Cross worker will meet with individuals and families affected by the flood disaster in order to assess immediate disaster-caused needs. Assistance may include providing the means to pay for what's needed most - from groceries, new clothing and rent to emergency home repairs, transportation, household items, medicines and tools. The Red Cross can also refer individuals to other community resources that may be able to help.

Individuals or families applying for Red Cross assistance should bring with them some form of identification showing their address before the disaster.

Red Cross will continue to provide assistance to disaster clients as long as needed - until all disaster-related needs are met. All Red Cross disaster assistance is free, a gift of the American People.

Red Cross has opened close to 950 cases providing disaster-caused needs in Monterey and Santa Cruz Counties.

For more information, contact Noreen Violetta at pager # 415-807-3936.

SOME SUPER AGENTS HAVE GREAT DELIVERY

In real estate, when it boils right down to it, everybody uses the same standard contracts to list a house for sale. There is probably no other industry where so many competitors try so hard to distinguish themselves as different and unique, yet have so little actual deviation in contractual obligations.

What makes some agents successful and others unsuccessful is simply how they deliver.

Let me introduce you briefly to Andrew Lacy, Carlos Justo, Fred Wilson and Loretta Krumbholz. These are agents who really deliver. They're from (respectively) Spartanburg, S.C., Coconut Grove, Florida, Palm Springs and Prescott, Arizona.

Andrew Lacy is the politest and most unassuming guy I have ever met. At first, he reminds me of white bread - nothing offensive and nothing exciting. He speaks with deference, in a slow southern drawl peppered with "yes 'ms", "yessirs" and "y'alls." he wears thick glasses, too. Before he entered real estate, he was a marine. As a marine, he was assigned to be a personal bodyguard to both President Carter and President Regan. When he talks about real estate, he ignites.

Last year he sold 187 houses. The year before, 75 and in 1990 only 30. His goal for this year is 360 homes sold! How does he do it? Staying focused, he says. By using his time more efficiently each day, he can double his production. "Please don't be offended by anything I say," he begins with his clients. "This is strictly business and I won't be offended if you don't choose me as your agent, but you absolutely need my help if you want to sell this house.

He knows that the public needs his advice. He is brutally honest. Andrew is honest with himself as well. He won't spend any time at all with anyone who is not motivated to sell. He knows if he did, he wouldn't be able to service them properly. He won't even look at a house unless the owner has already agreed to list it. So his clients get what they want - their houses sold. He's so polite, I'm sure no one is offended, either.

Attitude

Rand Smith knows a lot about attitude.

It's one of the reasons he's been so successful in the real estate industry hereon the Peninsula.

If you're thinking about buying or selling a home, give Rand a call today.

No Hassles. No Obligation.

Carlos Justo is a 37 year-old Cuban immigrant who sells big homes to the rich and famous like Sylvester Stallone and Madonna. His average sale price is $1.5 million. It doesn't take a lot of sales for agents like Carlos to be successful. Nearly all "high end" agents around the country peak out around 25 to 30 million dollars in production, which means the best agents sell 10 to 15 homes. His goal is 100 sales.

To do this, Carlos showed me his detailed business plan - the numbers are staggering. He has hired a full-time personal consultant to monitor everything he does.

"I'm a showman," he says, admitting he needs people to manage the details. But Carlos knows the particulars on virtually every estate property around Miami. He personally calls 15 to 20 "very influential" people every day, prospecting for new business. His goals also include preparation to expand back into Cuba. If Cuba opens up, Carlos Justo will be a major player in real estate there, and will probably be looked back upon as one of the "leaders" who helped restore that country's prosperity. Carlos isn't a dreamer, he's just a big thinker.

Fred Wilson used to be a pro tennis player. He never became a household name, but he traveled the world on the pro circuit trying to become one. He has been in real estate now for only two years. He

Douglas Pease

Forty years ago U. S. factories accelerated production in response to clear market demand signals, then subsided as the demand for a product was satisfied. When everybody wanted a TV set, RCA, Motorola and Zenith made TV sets. When everybody had one or two TVs at home, production shut down.

Japanese companies built VCRs knowing every American TV owner would eventually have to get one. There was no product demand for VCRs because a VCR is a qualitative improvement of a TV set. We had just satisfied the craze for TV sets, and it was over. Even though U.S. technicians invented the VCR, Japanese companies built and sold them; there was no market signal to get U.S. production started. Cable operations was the qualitative improvement of a TV/VCR. And now movie operations is the qualitative improvement of cable operations. We no longer turn on our TV set, we turn on "multi-media" using a computer and software. Which can then become "interactive." And on and on...and on.

Once we step back from the classic view of production: Acceleration and contraction, we catch glimpses of the bonanza to be won by carrying qualitative improvements outward, globally, and onward, into the future. People who see things this way feel they are already in the greatest business growth period of all time. The rest of us are waiting for the recovery.

Monterey attorney focusing in the area of real estate law. She recently answered Monterey County listener's questions as a guest of William L. Smith on his radio show "Real Estate Today by Pacific Bay".

An inspection period can be negotiated as a part of a real estate contract. Often an inspection period between 10 to 20 days is allowed during the escrow to provide the buyer with time to explore any potential defects. The buyer's agent should always recommend due diligence in this regard, and help the buyer take the responsibility of investigating any flaws which might cause damage down the road. An agent can raise the red flag to find the underlying cause of what might seem like a superficial problem, but a professional contractor should further investigate for the best possible information about the condition of the property.

All Realtors are required to follow and comply with all rules imposed by the Business and Professional Code and keep up to date with industry standards. The failure to do so may mean professional negligence. When the buyer takes responsibility by performing as many inspections as possible, the likelihood of unknown future repairs is greatly diminished and well worth the extra effort.

REAL ESTATE THOUGHTS

REAL ESTATE LAWS CONSTANTLY CHANGING

Recent California legislation regulating disclosure requirements is aimed at protecting the public as well as real estate professionals. The amendments to the required Transfer Disclosure Statement state that a Realtor has the responsibility too make a visual inspection of reasonable accessible areas of a property and disclose any defects seen. The benefits of having a

Home Inspection or a Pest Report become more essential at this point because it will point out not only structural problems, but make the buyer aware of any areas which may present problems in the future. An agent does not, however, have a duty to look at public records, permits or inspect anything pertaining to the property which is off-site. So explained Loretta Loop, a

A few important words about Harbor Seals

By Elizabeth Cowley

Harbor seals are protected under the Marine Mammal Protection Act of 1972. The Pebble Beach Company has participated in the Harbor Seal Protection Program for the past 8 years. PBC closes Fanshell Beach and Cypress Point Lookout to the public during the birthing season. The harbor seals must remain undisturbed during the birthing season as the mother seals may abandon or trample their young if alarmed.

Gene Fryberger, PBC Environmental Manager and Roxayne Spruance, PBC Naturalist, both work year round on the Pebble Beach Company's environmental outreach educational program and they have over 80 harbor seal tours scheduled for school children and environmental groups in April and May. On the guided tours the seals can be viewed from Cypress Point Lookout through peep holes cut through the mural, minimizing the impact on the seals. Fanshell Beach and Cypress Point Lookout will be reopened to the public in late May at which time the public can view the harbor seal mothers and pups. The murals will remain in place for an additional few weeks so they can be viewed by the public.

Club offers free health guidance

To help the people of the Monterey Peninsula exercise for good health, Carmel Valley Racquet & Health Club will open its doors to the community on May 1, 1995 at 5:30 a.m. as part of a month-long national awareness program called Commit to Get Fit.

Visitors will be encouraged to enjoy free seminars and demonstrations for all available club activities, including tennis, aerobics, cardiovascular conditioning, aquatics, strength training as well as some stress reducing and play activities. Carmel Valley Racquet & Health Club staffers will be on hand to offer advice and information. "Our goal is to make more and more people in the Monterey Peninsula area aware of the lifelong value of moderate exercise. The more we can get people moving locally, the more we can contribute to a healthier nation," said Dennis Shepherd, owner of the Club.

Carmel Valley Racquet & Health Club is a member of the International Health, Racquet and Sportclub Association (IHRSA) which is sponsoring the seventh annual Commit to Get Fit program, involving more than 1,000 other health clubs throughout North America.

A 1993 study commissioned by the President's Council on Physical Fitness and Sports found that 59 percent of less active adults—approximately 48 million people—would like to be more physically active.

"What many people don't realize is that a little exercise goes a long way and that physical activity can be fun if you find the right activity," says Shepherd. "We invite anyone who's interested to visit Carmel Valley Racquet & Health Club, try our facilities and consult our staff for practical advice on starting a regular exercise program they'll enjoy."

sold 130 homes last year. That's as many homes as the next three best agents in his office combined. He has changed the famous Nike axiom from "Just Do It" to "Actually Do It."

The most important aspect to his success, he says, comes from "establishing the level of commitment" to his clients. He has designed a program he calls the "Fred Express." Every one of his clients is given a gold "credit card" which enables them to get discounts at stores and businesses throughout Palm Springs.

To actually implement this and make it succeed requires a huge commitment, particularly as a real estate agent, not a marketer. Fred is always focusing on opportunities. Each new client may become another merchant, who in turn wants more business and therefore helps promote the program. Fred is now rapidly becoming a household name.

Loretta Krumbholz is the most courageous agent I've met. This last year has been "the worst and the best year of my life," she says. She will sell well over 100 houses this year, which is her best year ever. She has had this success, even though she was diagnosed with cancer.

Through the trauma and the chemotherapy and the demands of her career and her family, she has found herself, spiritually, in the best place she has ever been. "I wish I had cancer sooner," she said, "so I would've been smarter, faster."

Loretta has learned about the incredible power of belief. "You have to be a host of sickness, physically or mentally," she says. "And you can become well, no matter what your circumstances. Wellness is as much a state of mind as anything else." No matter what is currently happening to her body, Loretta is the healthiest person in real estate today.

Honesty. Goals. Commitment. Belief. These are words that aren't written on the listing contract. However, agents like Andrew, Carlos, Fred and Loretta make sure that's what is being delivered.
